Harrington shoots 64 to lead in Akron

Padraig Harrington never allowed himself to get down during the worst of times, whether he was missing five straight cuts or finishing toward the bottom of the leader board.

tomorrow? I think I would not put much emphasis on the fact that I shot 64. I'm comfortable with it.

with an even-par 70, along with defending champion Vijay Singh.

Harrington finally saw some results after eight months of tinkering with his swing, making a pivotal par save early that sent him on his way to a 6-under-par 64 and a two-shot lead in the Bridgestone Invitational in Akron.

He didn't act much differently yesterday after his best round of the year.

Stewart Cink, playing 18 holes for the first time since his playoff win over Tom Watson in the British Open, shot a 69.

All-Ohio Red fulfills goal of title three-peat

When Quentin Rogers began coaching the All-Ohio Red AAU basketball team in 2007, it didn't take long for him to realize that having players such as Jared Sullinger and J.D. Weatherspoon meant he was leading a team with unprecedented talent.

and won 28 of the 33 tournaments they entered.

"If we had lost, looking back, we would probably consider our career a success," said Aaron Craft, a Findlay Liberty-Benton guard who has committed to play at Ohio State.

San Jose Sharks: Announced the retirement of C Jeremy Roenick.

St. Louis Blues: Named Ed Belfour goalie consultant.

"After the first game, I knew that we would be a dominant team," Rogers said. "He couldn't have known, however, the feat they would accomplish three seasons later."

Last Saturday, Rogers' 17-and-under Red team — one full of future Division I college players — posted a 76-66 victory over Boo Williams Summer League of Virginia to win the AAU junior national championship.

It was an admirable achievement, but the team's national titles in the previous two years made it unparalleled.

No 17-and-under team had won three straight national titles. Rogers, though, had given his players a goal to be "the greatest AAU team ever."

"We are the best ever," said Reynoldsburg's Kevin Gray, one of the seven players who were on all three championship teams. "That's all we wanted to hear, that we're the best team in the nation."

There is plenty of evidence to back up such statements. In the players' three years together, they posted a 201-9 record and won 28 of the 33 tournaments they entered.

"Everybody wants to be successful in the program," said Benji Burke, the coach of the 16-and-under team. "We looked at Jared (Sullinger) and those guys and saw the stuff that they are able to do. The younger guys want to be like them. It's good for the whole program."

It does, however, increase pressure on the teams for next year.

"It's going to be real hard to follow in (the 17-and-unders) footsteps because every tournament they've been to they've basically won," guard Trey Burke said. "But if we get another one, it would really help out a lot."

Funderburke focuses on stocks

By Josh Jarman

THE COLUMBUS DISPATCH

NEWARK, Ohio — It was all hands in the air when Lawrence Funderburke asked a group of about 20 youths in the basement of Shiloh Missionary Baptist Church if anyone owned a pair of Nike sneakers.

The 38-year-old former Ohio State standout and NBA player then admonished the group when none could say he or she owned stock in the company.

"Stop making companies rich, and start getting rich off these companies," he said. "That's how you get paid."

The advice yesterday was

"This is a team that is boring to watch, but any given year they are going to be there," he said of the Spurs.

Funderburke, who retired from the Chicago Bulls in 2005, said later that financial literacy is neglected in public education, especially among poor, urban and African-American communities.

He said his program is geared to teach young people the necessity of risk in order to receive financial reward when investing.

"So many times if we think there's a chance we'll lose money, we won't risk it," he said.
